

Opening Pandora's Box

Erika Mann

Tuesday 9 March, 5pm to 7pm at Glasgow Women's Library

Opening Pandora's Box

Rediscovering Forgotten Firebrands

Erika Mann and Marta Astfalck-Vietz – two New Women artists of twenties Berlin.

Tuesday 9 March, 5pm to 7pm at Glasgow Women's Library, 81 Parnie Street.

Katherine Tubb and Jochen Hung will lead an exclusive unearthing of some lost German art pioneers. Followed by a workshop exploring more aspects of lesbian history and culture with Amy Tooth Murphy and the GWL Archivist, Hannah Little. Open to men and women.

The journalist Erika Mann and the photographer Marta Astfalck-Vietz worked in Berlin during the 1920s and lived fully emancipated lives – sexually, financially, and creatively. In Germany, however, Marta's photographs, as well as many of Erika's articles, have been largely forgotten until recent years and have never been presented to a Scottish audience before. They offer insights into a period of radical change in German history: social and political, cultural and economic. To celebrate International Women's Day these talks will explain how Erika and Marta were forgotten and then re-discovered, and will explore the links between the advent of the modern era and the lives of these unusual, compelling, and inspirational women.

For more information or to book your place send an email to info@womenslibrary.org.uk or call us on 0141 552 8345. This event is kindly supported by the University of Glasgow.

Glasgow Women's Library 81 Parnie Street, Glasgow G1 5RH
T: 0141 552 8345 E: info@womenslibrary.org.uk
Registered Company No: 178507 Charity No: SCO 29881

University of Glasgow

Faculty of Arts